for PowerPC and Intel computers, and it requires OS 9.0 or higher. Actions are triggered by pressing keyboard or mouse buttons Create, edit and manage actions Actions can be triggered by pressing a mouse button or by using a keyboard key. Select the options that work best for you. You can assign actions to keys, buttons or combinations of keys and buttons. Use the mouse to define the size of the actions, specify the size of the screen where the action is applied, and set the priority. Actions can be repeated automatically by their period of time (one time, repeat a number of times, or every time the mouse button or the key is pressed) or when you select some options (a mouse button or a key is pressed, a period of time passes, etc.).

Eliminate hotkeys and mouse clicks

When a key is pressed, you can use the keyboard to select a range of actionable items. To do so, you can press, hold and release the key, or you can add an action of which the result depends on the key pressed.

The actions that you can select are: -

Clear the selection - Go to the next item in the list - Go to the previous item in the list - Activate the menu - Select the item under the cursor

You can specify the number of items that are selected by the last action. You can use the mouse to select a range of items. When you select an item, you can use the mouse to specify the size of the selected area. You can also set options that have an impact on the selected area: - The size of the area that is selected - The contents of the area that is selected - The type of item that is selected - The priority for the selected area You can use the mouse to move the selected area. To do so, you can drag the mouse on the items in the selection, or you can move the selection to another area. You can press a mouse button to select the item under the cursor. You can select multiple items. Automatically execute actions You 77a5ca646e
