1. Technical Field The present invention relates to a technique for operating a charge/discharge current control function included in a charging/discharging operation of a battery to prevent a battery from being over-discharged and a battery from being turned into a state in which the battery is unlikely to be recharged.

2. Related Art In recent years, a battery of a hybrid vehicle having a charging/discharging current control function has been proposed. For example, in a battery of a hybrid vehicle, it is necessary to connect the battery in parallel with a high voltage side of a power storage device such as an alternator and generate a large current by connecting the battery in series with the power storage device. In this case, a charging current is controlled so as to be smaller than a total of a maximum charging current that can be generated when an external charger is connected and a current that is required to charge the battery. In order to control a charging current to be smaller than a charging current in the case of connecting the power storage device in parallel with the battery, charging or discharging of the battery is controlled such that a battery voltage is increased or decreased and a charging or discharging current is decreased as the battery voltage is increased or decreased. For example, JP-A-2008-256272 discloses a control apparatus that calculates and
