Google Talk is a useful application, for which it is easy to get the hang of its options. It is designed to make your communication with your friends and people who use Gmail easy. Google Talk Description: Google Talk is a useful application, for which it is easy to get the hang of its options. It is designed to make your communication with your friends and people who use Gmail easy. Google Talk is a simple, yet functional instant messenger that has a basic look and feel. It allows people to chat online with their friends and contacts using their Gmail accounts. In order to start chatting, the user simply needs to type in his or her Google username and password. Once in the chat, messages are sent to all contacts in the user's contact list, while the inbox is monitored and a notification is received when new emails arrive. Other options include creating voicemails, browsing files and also viewing available emoticons. A user image can also be set, selecting one of the available defaults or choosing one from the user's PC. You can also block certain contacts from your contact list, while you can also save the chat history within your Gmail account, so it can be easily accessed, regardless of the host PC. There are options in the Settings window to customize the chat window, to select the type of notifications you prefer or block some contacts from your list. Google Talk has been replaced by Hangouts, a Chrome extension that allows you to chat with your Google+ friends.

Hangouts Features: It is developed as a simple yet very efficient instant messenger, allowing people to chat over the Internet as long as they have a compatible user account. It is very user friendly, it sports a clean look along with basic customization functions. Nothing too fancy or too difficult, just the functions one needs when looking for a simple chat. Once the Google username and password is typed in, the user logs in, yet, just like in any other IM software, contacts need to be added
