A: Selenium is a webdriver. What you're calling a "web scraping" is likely to be referred to as "web automation" or "web automation testing" (The software you are installing appears to be a web-based browser that allows you to enter some details and receive an output based on those details. The output you receive is actually an html file that appears like a table. You can either parse that, using whatever language is easiest for you, or you can run the page in a web browser and examine the result. That software that you're installing is probably the result of an organisation who found that it was relatively easy to write scripts to use Selenium to automate the tests it needed to run, and decided that it would be a more efficient use of their time to write that as a web-based application instead of manually. If you don't mind running something similar to that but in Python, I'd recommend Mechanize (Regardless, the key point is that you'd need to find a way to interact with the software you're trying to test, in order to use Selenium to interact with it. In general, web automation is a tool that is used to test websites. For example, you might use Selenium to type in the website address to be tested, select a few options, and hit "submit" in order to apply those options to that page. Man pleads guilty in Colo. zoo killings DENVER (AP) — A man whose shooting and killing of two bears at a Colorado zoo led to the closure of the facility has pleaded guilty to two counts of misdemeanor animal cruelty. The Denver Post reported that 23-year-old Kevin Lovelace will spend three years on probation and pay $9,200 in fines following the plea on Wednesday. The big cats' deaths led to increased animal welfare regulations and an investigation by the federal government. Lovelace was arrested after officials determined that he had illegally removed and moved the bears from the Fairview Lodge and Gardens near Windsor. Lovelace was charged with three felonies, but prosecutors dropped the animal cruelty charges after he pleaded guilty to one count of misdemeanor animal cruelty.Q: Calculate the disk usage percentage I need to calculate the disk usage percentage.
