The Pale Moon of Mypal Mypal is a dedicated web browser that is designed to work smoothly and securely with Windows XP. Nevertheless, you can run the application with newer versions of Windows as well. Provides a secure and optimal running browser for Windows XP The browser comes with a clean interface inspired by Pale Moon, which itself is a tool adapted after Firefox. Consequently, you can notice some quick links to the first browser, such as release notes, F.A.Q., the main page and the forum. In case you feel they make the interface too crowded, then you can remove them via the context menu. The idea behind the app is to enable users who are using Windows XP to browse the web just as securely as others on newer versions of Windows. According to the developer, the unused legacy code from Mozilla is removed, so online navigation should not put a strain on your computer resources. Comes with anti-tracking and other security features You will be happy to learn that you can configure the tool to never remember history, so it can benefit from the same settings as private browsing in Firefox. At the same time, you can enable an anti-tracking feature so that you warn websites that you do not want to be tracked. While websites are not required to respect this, the ones that adhere to this principle should automatically stop tracking your behavior without any further consent. As far as security is concerned, you can set the up to send warnings when sites are attempting to install add-ons. Thus, there are less chances you can wake up with a new toolbar or extension after browsing. Moreover, you have five security levels in this sense and can set it to High where all add-ons with known issues are blocked. Allows syncing with Pale Moon via the same account Lastly, it is worth mentioning that Mypal allows you to synchronize the searches, bookmarks and other services with Pale Moon. You can get started by accessing the option from the menu and then the logging in with your account. In case you did not use Pale Moon before, the you need to create an account to benefit from this feature.Lectin-mediated stabilization of cross-linked boron nanowire arrays for catalysis and enzyme immobilization.
