DVD Flick is a software solution designed to help you create DVDs using the video files stored on your computer.

Basically, you can add as many files as you want, of course as long as they fit on a DVD, and play them on your dedicated DVD player, media center or any other devices able to deal with such content. While the interface is pretty intuitive and easy to navigate, DVD Flick provides support for a wide array of video formats, including 3GP, AVI, FLV, MP4, MKV, MOV, OGM and WMV. Moreover, the application lets you create interactive menus to allow the viewers browse through files, with multiple, but not too many, built-in templates included in the pack. The settings menu allows you to choose the title of the project and the target size, configure the encoder and the thread count, adjust video and audio options, set up playback and customize the burning process. DVD Flick enables you to create either an ISO file that can be later burned on a disc or burn the project automatically once your work comes to an end. The program boasts an online help file that's more of a step-by-step guide especially useful to beginners who may need assistance while trying to set up a new project. Of course, the whole process takes some time, because you need to pick the files and configure the menus, but the amount of needed resources is minimal. Overall, DVD Flick is a very easy to use application that can be safely used by beginners and more experienced users at absolutely no cost. Features: • Advanced interface with a streamlined interface, easy-to-use options and a wide range of video formats supported • User-friendly option to select video, audio and subtitle tracks • Create menus with multiple, but not too many, built-in templates •

Re: DVD Flick - The first Multimedia Burner - BETA 11 Posted 05 September 2011 - 05:22 AM Hey, just wanted to share a little about this DVD Flick. The first thing that i've noticed is that this is a BETA version and that DVD Flick is on the 2.9.3.0 version of Nero AIM. Re: DVD Flick - The first Multimedia Burner - BETA 11 Posted 05 September 2011 - 06:42 AM @Joaquin When we are talking about Blu-ray, we are talking about the discs coming from companies like Sony, Paramount, Warner and other majors. They are all encoding everything as-is and with copy protection mechanisms built-in so that people do not have the chance to rip it and use it at home.
