What's New in the?

This is a portable to-do application for the list of tasks. A list of tasks can be created and completed in the same program without leaving your home. In addition to simple list of tasks, you can create reports of your tasks and send them to an email. You can keep a view of your tasks even when your workstation is turned off. Been doing a little bit of research on how to do this and have tried a few things... but cant figure out how to do it. Tried many different techniques but nothing works. I want to convert a.txt file (keeps the file name and data in the same order) into a txt file that adds a space after each "Tab" so I can do a Split to convert it to an array... Im using this code which works when I have a file of just one line. `string input = txtReadLine.Text; string[] splitted = input.Split('\t'); txtWrite.Text = ""; foreach (string s in splitted) { txtWrite.Text += s; }` I tried adding a `\t` to the code, but nothing happens.

Anyone with a solution to this problem? A: You could just write the content of the first line of your txtFile to a new file and use the output file of that process as a "master file" for the split. As another alternative, you could also just iterate over your txtFile line by line, add a `"\t"` at the end of the current line and remove the "previous" line's last `"\t"` so that you always only have a single "tab". As an other alternative you could read the content of your txtFile into a `StringBuilder` which you can then pass to a `String.Split()` with the `"\t"` as separator:

`String.Split()` has the following documentation: Splits a string into an array of substrings based on a specified string. Helping people
