

Shooting and Editing Photos There are two parts to a digital camera: the built-in optical viewfinder (OVF) or display that shows the frame boundaries of the camera's monitor (Figure 2-1), and the lens that creates the image. FIGURE 2-1: A digital camera has a built-in display that you use to compose your images. For the best results, your first photograph should be focused and exposed correctly, and the background should be perfectly flat, free of distracting elements, and provide the perfect backdrop for your subject. To ensure that you're taking good photos, follow these tips: * **Use a tripod or other steady support for your camera.** When you handhold a camera, you're usually using only the center part of your camera

In vitro antibacterial activity of zinc oxide in a model of gingivitis. The aim of this study was to evaluate the in vitro antibacterial activity of zinc oxide (ZnO) in a model of gingivitis. Gingival sulcus fluid (GSF) was collected from healthy volunteers and from patients with moderate generalized gingivitis and plaque. GSF was prepared from the third molar, the first premolar, and the lower incisor of the same subject. The antimicrobial effects of ZnO were evaluated by MIC and time-kill curves. ZnO inhibited the growth of bacterial plaque-associated species (Actinomyces naeslundii ATCC 12104, Streptococcus sanguis ATCC 10556, Streptococcus mutans ATCC 25175, and Streptococcus salivarius ATCC 13419) in gingival sulcus fluid diluted at 1:50. In plaque, ZnO inhibited the growth of A. naeslundii ATCC 12104, S. sanguis ATCC 10556, S. mutans ATCC 25175, and S. salivarius ATCC 13419. The ZnO concentration required to prevent bacterial growth was equal to the MIC value. Thus, ZnO at a concentration of 200 microg/ml is capable of inhibiting the growth of bacterial plaque-associated species in gingival sulcus fluid and plaque.

Q:  $\forall n, n^2 + \frac{1}{n} > 0$  I'm trying to prove that  $\forall n, n^2 + \frac{1}{n} > 0$ . So far, I have;  $n^2 + \frac{1}{n} = n + \frac{1}{n} > 0$   $\frac{1}{n} > 0$  and the last quantity is always positive when  $n > 0$

What's New in the?

The impact of emergency department crowding on the management and outcome of patients with ST-elevation myocardial infarction. We tested the hypothesis that ED crowding is associated with a higher rate of Emergency Department (ED)-initiated thrombolysis, faster time from ED arrival to treatment, higher mortality, and increased length of stay (LOS) among patients with ST-elevation myocardial infarction (STEMI). We performed a retrospective review of all patients with STEMI presenting to one of two suburban, tertiary-care, public hospital EDs during a 6-month period. Patients were dichotomized into "stable" (no ED treatment) and "non-stable" (ED-initiated thrombolysis, primary percutaneous coronary intervention [PCI], or observation) based on their ED LOS. The association between crowding (defined as >2 patients per certified emergency physician) and non-stable vs stable ED presentations were compared using multivariable logistic regression models, adjusted for patient and hospital characteristics. Among 262 patients, 43% were stable. Crowding (OR 2.09, 95% CI 1.16-3.72) was independently associated with non-stable presentations. Of crowding (OR 3.97, 95% CI 1.93-8.18), age (OR 1.02, 95% CI 1.00-1.04), treatment year (OR 1.06, 95% CI 1.02-1.11), and female gender (OR 2.19, 95% CI 1.23-3.90) were independent predictors of non-stable presentation. Crowding was not associated with LOS, time from ED arrival to treatment, or in-hospital mortality. Emergency department crowding is an independent risk factor for non-stable ED presentations. While most patients treated with thrombolysis within 2 h of ED arrival had a stable presentation, crowding was associated with a higher rate of non-stable presentation and higher mortality. This demonstrates the importance of ED crowding in STEMI.

NEW ORLEANS — Don't expect to see all-out war during the NFL's 2011 Pro Bowl, but it's the NFC's way of saying "how ya doin', you SOBs?" "I think we like people in our house and we like to have a good time," Steve Spagnuolo said after coaching the NFC against the
