Starlite: Astronaut Rescue is developed in collaboration with NASA at Ames Research Center. The game provides a glimpse into the future of life on Mars. We are very thankful to NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory for bringing many real elements from the planet Mars to virtual reality. Starlite: Astronaut Rescue is built in Unity3D game engine. Who Are We? Starlite is a small games company located in Portland, OR, with a variety of other games we have created in the past including Kerbal Space Program and an upcoming version of Quantum Conundrum. The Starlite team is made up of former teachers and industrial engineers, who love to play games, learn technology and create new worlds. More About The Game Starlite: Astronaut Rescue is a space mission management game on Mars inspired by the "Star Trek" style, "Star Trek: The Next Generation". Players of the game will experience the thrill of being a future astronaut in an environment containing original red rock terrain from Mars on the desktop. The game contains hands-on science inquiry and problem solving in mathematics, physics and engineering, with an adventure mode where players will take their future crew on a rescue mission to Mars. The game builds on top of many other recent game releases such as Kerbal Space Program, SteamVR, the Unity 3D game engine and others to create a very believable Mars environment, space suit models and intelligent robotic characters. The developers collaborate closely with NASA and real-world experts to ensure the game is historically accurate. In addition to this, Starlite: Astronaut Rescue also features integrated Intelligent Science Crafting Engine, which allows players to create useful items based on their knowledge of chemistry, physics and engineering in the game. This unique mechanic also allows players to learn about chemical reactions at specific points in the game. Space Miners: You Are Looking For Gold Mining The planet Venus is lifeless. And if you get in there, you are in trouble. Your spacesuit is failing and your ship is under attack from one of Venus's fearsome storm clouds. The only thing to do is to try and escape as soon as you can, but that's going to be a lot harder than you think. #### What's new:

- Gloomstrider - Review Gloomstrider is a middle-tier dungeon in Shards of Zavatsan where a couple dozen fighting Thalmor assassins wait to ambush parties of bandits. Ashkelon, Cirith Ungol, Towers of Qa'das A new tier is added to Middle Earth every single month. With additions like the Moria set, an officially-recognized collection of Gloomstrider extensions (the Minas Morgul set), the entire Shimmering Shores set, and now the complete Arcane Tower set, I get the sense that the lore team has apparently started to greenlight a new tier every month. The year is still young, and it would be surprising to see that continue, but in an increasingly cluttered world of high-end content, I think they've added a tier to the group every month since The Old Forest was announced. The problems with this has already been documented on the blog, but I might as well go on and discuss them for any newcomers. For one, the Endless Stairwell set makes good use of the existing labyrinthine layout, but I think that if the tiers are going to contain several dungeons of the same sort, it makes sense to use the whole expansion as a kind of conduit to get players to these smaller dungeons. For another, the addition of a weird mini-boss that should have been a fight more than a random NPC makes no sense as they tend to fit into a 3 person start group a bit too well. And most importantly, there are "fun moments" in the rotation from the five dungeons. Both Cair Andrath and Cirith Ungol line up very nicely to a 2 month dungeon rotation that has the 5 and 7 day dungeons split between T1 and T2. It is fairly necessary to spend a week in the Tower to get the most from the set, but not especially necessary to be in there for two weeks. That being said, this set has some problems that make it a difficult purchase for me as a pandemic player. The first is the addition of a crafting component that is totally random. Aziz, the furnace vendor in the Vanishing Portal NPCGuild near the beginning of the set, has run out of all of the MoL materials except ore (are you out?). You can pick a random two of a given material, with a chance of a fourth high enough that picking ore is the optimum choice. If you want

Campaign of Conquest is a free-to-play MMOFPS developed by Inon Games in collaboration with Gamers Outreach. Arena Commander is now available. A console launch is expected to begin in the fall of 2014.The last few days have seen heavy combat activity in the contested city of Marawi and greater Lanao del Sur province. An estimated 100 terrorists linked to the Maute group have occupied a large part of the city of 200,000. Reports from the scene suggest that hundreds of people have been killed and hundreds more injured. It seems the Maute group has been effectively financed by the network of these abductees. The scene of chaos and bloodshed is being publicly documented and then uploaded onto social media by the terrorists. By doing this they are inviting a public response. Could the Maute group make the death of civilians and destruction of their own assets on social media an act of martyrdom? The answer is yes. In their twisted worldview, martyrdom is an act of political defiance that seeks to galvanize public support. A martyrdom video can be used to recruit new members and to appeal for external support for them. The creation of such a video is an act of political self-aggrandizement and a declaration that they are willing to trade their own lives to achieve their purpose. The media and governments have begun to speculate that the terrorists may have received assistance in the fight from overseas. They have been using the social media to make statements that could be interpreted as threats or appeals for help. Will the terrorists really reach out to al-Qaeda or ISIS for assistance? If the answer is 'yes' then the implications are profound. Would it mean that they are willing to work with a group that is outlawed in some Muslim nations? One has to keep in mind that ISIS was not formed until two decades after the birth of the Maute group. Would it be a reflection of who the Maute group considers to be heroes? While we have to wait to see the death toll, death threats and the number of casualties, the motivation of the Maute group is not hard to discern. It is an extremist group of Muslims that are allied to the Mindanao-based Abu Sayyaf and the Maute group is subservient to ISIS. Would ISIS have been interested in assisting the Maute group with their recent campaign? If they did, who would have controlled their operations? The poor organisation of the Maute group and its inability to secure Marawi has made this a difficult
