Photoprotection from UVB with antioxidant and phytoestrogenic beverages. Consumer attitudes about health and wellness are important trends. A beverage, Photonautics, containing photoprotective ingredients such as antioxidants and phytoestrogens, was formulated to enhance photoprotection. A randomized, placebo controlled, three arm, crossover study was conducted in which healthy, non-pregnant, nondiabetic women (n = 56) received antioxidant (AO), phytoestrogen (PE) or placebo beverages prior to ultraviolet-B (UVB) exposure. Blood was obtained for analysis of UVB effects on antioxidants. There were no differences in photoprotection between groups. AO and PE beverages maintained vitamin C concentration throughout the study. AO and PE groups had greater 25-hydroxyvitamin D, but this did not correlate with photoprotection. Dietary habits were not altered by the beverages. The results suggest that individualized antioxidant-containing beverages may have limited photoprotection in healthy, non-pregnant women.Q: Why do some topological groups need additional conditions? Having read the book "Introduction to point set topology" (Szeptycki), I'm wondering if I'm not missing something, but why do some topological groups need additional conditions? Consider the topology on the unit group \mathbb{Z} on the modular group $\mathrm{PSL}(2,\mathbb{Z})$ on the symmetric group $S_{\mathbb{S}}$ Do we need more conditions in these cases or are these examples just trivial? A: We need additional conditions if the topology is on an algebraic object. (1) \mathbb{Z} is an abelian group, but the only group topology that is an abelian group topology is the discrete topology. (2) $\mathrm{SL}(2,\mathbb{Z})$ has nontrivial abelianization. (3) $S_{\mathbb{S}}$ has nontrivial center. These are trivial for some choice of topology, but not for the discrete topology. // // Generated by class-dump 3.5 (64 bit) (Debug version compiled Oct 15 2018 10:31:50). // // class-dump is Copyright (C) 1997

Dellin Betances Will Be the Bronx Bombers' Long-Sought Closer The Yankees' bullpen is, to be kind, lacking. The team ranked dead last in the American League in ERA (4.23) and allowing 29 home runs. In fact, the 'pen was so bad that the record-setting relievers were forced to start games in the rotation. There was a brief time when the Yankees had the luxury of having a reliable closer, and if the Yankees had hoped to make a winning run, that time had been now. Enter Dellin Betances, the most untouchable reliever in the system, and a guy who has a three-game save streak going to the Yankees' record of 1-for-22, 21st in the majors. Betances was brought up from the minors with a role as a seventh reliever and long man, but has since become the Yankees' most reliable arm. Bob Nightengale of USA Today tweeted on Thursday that the Yankees have agreed to trade closer David Robertson to the Cardinals for a player to be named later. The deal could be completed as soon as Friday, according to Nightengale. Robertson is due $23 million in salary this year and '14, and the Yankees were hoping to move him and some of his contract salary to the Dodgers in exchange for a player. With Robertson gone, the Yankees can just let Betances establish himself as their closer, and they will find a way to get his remaining salary off their books. The 26-year-old Betances was spectacular in the minors, and even when he arrived in the majors, he had a 1.18 ERA with 49 strikeouts and 21 walks in 51 innings. The Yankees have no one else who can close that would be as coveted, as a combination of their organizational depth and injury issues, but Betances' arm strength, confidence and experience stand out to the Yankees. Betances can still be a valuable mid-reliever, and the Yankees might have a few more moves to make before the trade deadline next week. The Yankees are likely trying to sign free agent reliever Jason Grilli, but the right-hander has been reportedly asking for $10 million per season and is scheduled to make $4.25 million in 2014. Over the weekend, the Yankees announced the firing of Joe Girardi and the hiring of Joe Girardi. Dan Martin has a full report. 4
