The new player models are more realistic and detailed than ever, with muscle mass, skin texture and added creases to show the dramatic differences between man and machine. Unique lines and rough surfaces show where the robot is dealing with the player's body. Users can also experience a brand new match engine that features a redesigned ball physics, with the ball performing more like a real sphere as players hit and head it, allowing more intelligent play and more options for shots. Further, backpacks and other similar accessories have been added for all players in the back six, to add realism and help players make better decisions on the pitch. There have also been improvements to ball behaviour and physical contact, with more unpredictable shots, more accurate and unexpected headers and new breakaway and power dribbling moves. Real players not only look the part, they also play the part. For the first time, fans can experience professional players' motion capture data and see how they move on the pitch. Players involved in the suit had more energy, as they were breathing and sweating heavily in order to perform the moves. This means that players can make it even harder on the opposition. Key features: New and improved Player Intelligence The AI is smarter and more reactive, and makes more intelligent decisions on the pitch. Players will now change direction more quickly and make more intelligent decisions, including when to pass to a team-mate and when to take a shot. Players will also change their style of play depending on what type of match it is. For example, defensively, a player may take on a more challenging style of play if they know they're facing an opponent with skills they don't possess. New Ball Physics The ball behaves more like a sphere, which makes it much more unpredictable and helps it perform more like a real ball, with more energy when being kicked, punched or headed. Players can now drive the ball even harder by driving into the ball more quickly. The ball also flies more realistically, making passes even harder for the opposition, as well as making shots look more brilliant. Ally Safeguard Ally Safeguard is a new feature for forwards that aims to protect the player when they are in a duel. The system detects when a player is about to lose the duel and rushes forward to either block or neutralise the defender. Players can now also press the pass button from the R2 button, allowing them to drive the ball
