Check out our forums or contact our staff by filling out the.The Democratic National Committee is going to even up its game, Senator Bernie Sanders announced on Sunday in a video interview with Martin O'Malley. "I am running for president in 2016," Sanders said in the video. "I do not believe now, as so many Americans do, that the only way to move our country forward is to make a titanic mistake in selecting a candidate with less experience and a less progressive agenda than Hillary Clinton." He held nothing back against the Clinton camp, calling it "impossible" to trust her on the issues. "Bernie Sanders, whether it is appropriate or not, he was very critical of Bill Clinton in the days following Hurricane Katrina," Sanders said. "That is the way he treated Bill Clinton." Sanders went on to say that this is a fight that "we must have" and that he is prepared to take on Hillary Clinton on a point-by-point basis. Though we've seen this battle before, the warnings of "sore losers" and "appealing only to the young" have been proven false time and time again. Sanders is making a point, and his grassroots support is showing. He is not backing away from the debate. Watch: [image via screengrab] — — Follow Josh Feldman on Twitter:
