Chewing gum is widely used by children and adults and is one of the most commonly encountered source of unintentional ingestion in childhood. As with other food substances, chewing gum may contain contaminants, such as heavy metals, toxic organic substances, and in some cases, parasites or infection. There is little information concerning the incidence of such heavy metal contamination of chewing gum. Metals analyzed in this study included calcium, iron, potassium, magnesium, manganese, copper, zinc, arsenic, cobalt, nickel, and lead. Samples of chewing gum were collected from retail stores in Toronto and Ontario, Canada, between September 2000 and April 2001. The results of analyses of these elements and other contaminants, when found, are presented. The

UKIP leader Nigel Farage has been hailed a national hero in the wake of the Leave victory in the EU referendum. Before the historic vote, Nigel Farage had been branded an “unmixed toff” by The Daily Telegraph newspaper, despite the Brexiteer’s life circumstances seemingly immaterial. The Leave campaign had insisted that migration to Britain was a detriment to the country’s economic health, whereas the Remain side vigorously argued that jobs would be lost if the UK voted to leave the EU. Ukip leader Nigel Farage has been hailed a national hero following the Leave vote in the EU referendum (PA) Mr Farage became the highest-profile Brexiteer in British political history in November 2014, when he resigned as leader of UKIP. Dead Fortress Beta: Music by Kevin MacLeod, Creative Commons: By Attribution 3.0 WISHLIST NOW! The Haunted Bog of Sudbury is a haunted attraction in Sudbury, Ontario, Canada. The attraction has been open since 1980. History The Haunted Bog of Sudbury has been open since 1980, and has become a popular attraction for the surrounding area. The attraction has its beginnings in the cottage of Harry Sanderson, a resident of Sudbury. Sanderson sought to construct a somewhat haunted attraction. Originally he sought to have an apparition of a woman who looked exactly like his wife. However, when Sanderson called up his wife for permission to construct the attraction, the woman was nowhere to be found, having apparently left the marriage with her husband several years prior to that time. This is where Harry Sanderson was unable to locate his wife and began his search for a haunted site. One evening, while Harry Sanderson and his friends were drinking beer and eating pizza, Harry informed them of his plan to construct a haunted bog. His friends agreed to help in any way they could. It was decided that the site would be situated at a hunting camp that his friends had rented from their parents, which allowed the project to take place without worry of losing any potential customers. Prior to construction, the friends of Harry Sanderson decided to dig a hole in the floor of the cottage, so that any noise made during the construction of the attraction would not reach the sleeping occupants. With the hole already dug, work on the attraction began. During the first few days of construction, Harry Sanderson was able to attract a few of his friends and acquaintances, which helped in his ability to keep up with the construction. One of the earliest attractions built at the Haunted Bog of Sudbury, was a mannequin made of clay that was found during the excavation process of the bog. This particular mannequin was made by a friend of Harry Sanderson named George. George was the assistant to Harry Sanderson during the construction of the attraction. George decided to make the mannequin on his lunch break. For this particular mannequin, George decided to make it a red mannequin, due to the fact that he had already made a manne

Most of us attempt to eat fish when we go out. Some of us, however, remember eating fish on a regular basis. I know some of you use a category for fish even though it isn't true fresh seafood. It's difficult to have a category for that. While introducing "free" fish into the category of fresh fish is difficult, it has been done. Considering this, I am sticking to the "fresh" category. I used to use a "category-free" aquarium but came to the conclusion it was possibly damaging my fish. I tried to use a small aquarium and I ended up getting it stuck in my back yard which doesn't help much because I had a small living area. Even though a small aquarium could be used for some, I didn't want a potential of a large aquarium getting to its full potential. I had a smaller aquarium and a small dorm since I start school in May. I clean the aquarium and water on a daily basis. Fresh is the only way to go but, there are many fish that are classified as fresh but, aren't. They're classified as "fresh" fish because they can be sold retail in a “fresh” fish store. Is it fresh when they are sold to you under a “fresh” category? As everyone knows, we hear, “Fresh is best; Frozen is second best.” Or in the case of this article, “Fresh is ‘best’”. Don’t be fooled by marketing tactics. Not the least of these are that, “best by” date would be “best”. In this case, it says that frozen can be used but, it might be ok, but, it might be best to use fresh. That’s the right answer, and there is no such thing as best. Frozen may be good or bad. It’s the same as an egg. If the egg is frozen, it can be considered unhealthy. I, personally, suggest getting everything that is frozen. You might think that, “I’m going to be studying today”. And you are, but, you might consider this: Frozen fish might have extremely high levels of toxins. Don’t think it’s a lower chance of finding harmful content than the previous day because
