Pharmacodynamic and safety studies with erythromycin stearate in patients with inflammatory airway disease. Erythromycin stearate was administered in an ascending dose study (1-12 mg every 6 hours for 24 hours) to a group of 12 patients with inflammatory airway disease. Five of these patients were also treated with oral steroid medication for short periods prior to the study. Blood and sputum samples were collected for erythromycin level and pharmacodynamic determinations. Erythromycin stearate was absorbed rapidly following oral administration and peak levels were reached within 1.5 to 2 hours. In oral steroid-treated patients serum levels were lower and kinetic profiles were delayed. In the drug-treated group AUC and Cmax values were linearly related to dose (r greater than 0.90). Area under the sputum levels versus time profile was also related to dose, confirming that the erythromycin effect is drug concentration dependent. Erythromycin stearate was well tolerated and no adverse effects were reported. & Despair Haunted houses make up one of the most popular attractions at Halloween. Whether you're searching for fun or a scary experience, haunted houses can satisfy both interests. When you step inside a haunted house, you simply want to be scared. Like all attractions that offer the opportunity to be scared, Halloween haunts are not intended for children under the age of 14. Yet, haunted houses are much larger than golf, hockey or football fields. The size of a haunted house can be six times the size of a football field. An incredible amount of money, manpower, skills and time is devoted to the design, build, and operation of a haunted house. Many personal friends from within the community get involved to develop a personality for their haunted house. This personal touch, along with its ultimate objective - to provide an enjoyable fright, makes haunted houses unique. A child can walk right up to and touch a bloody knife or a dead body in a haunted house. How often can you do that at a hockey or golf game? Halloween haunts are available in nearly every state in the U.S., and in some cases, around the world. Many haunt operators have a house in more than one state. It's common for haunted houses to travel to the next state within the same season, then return to their home state in another season. This type of rotating lineup helps operators address crowd issues by staying within a given region's peak season. Interest in Haunted Houses Halloween has been a popular Halloween season event for generations. Its popularity is not likely to wane any time soon. During its peak seasons, the number of visitors to a Halloween haunt may reach 4.5 to 5 million. During the next off-peak season, visitation may drop to two million or less. There are various methods for pricing a haunted house. Some operators depend upon scare-charge admission. Others might project their entire budget onto the front gate fence as a scare charge. A small haunted house can probably charge three or four dollars per person. Because Halloween is a major time of year for most haunted houses, they are relatively busy for most of the year. Halloween weekends can bring throngs of tourists to some haunts, further loading their calendars with extra guests. Halloween theme parks have been popular for decades. Fast-paced amusement parks spend most of their money on rides and games and hope to make a profit on food, souvenirs and advertising. Haunted houses are not amusement parks. They are unique Wellbeing after percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty. To clarify the pattern and emotional response of patients undergoing percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty (PTCA) as part of a scheduled routine clinical care process. A questionnaire regarding emotional response to and evaluation of PTCA was designed and administered at the time of PTCA and 24 hours later to 100 patients undergoing PTCA (64 patients under local anaesthesia and 36 patients under general anaesthesia). The questionnaire contained the following statements: (1) "I have felt worse as a result of the treatment"; (2) "I was disappointed with the results of the treatment"; (3) "It has been a worry to me"; (4) "I am worried about the outcome of the treatment"; (5) "I feel that I am a better person as a result of the treatment"; and (6) "I feel that the treatment was worthwhile". The patients were then given a further questionnaire which asked them to indicate the strength of their agreement to each of the above statements using a five-point scale. A total of 100 patients were studied. The majority of patients rated their emotional response to the procedure as "no change" (29%), "slightly better" (32%), "better" (23%) or "much better" (11%). The most common emotional responses were "no change" (44%), "slightly better" (25%) and "slightly worse" (12%). A majority of patients reported that PTCA was "worthwhile" (63%), "very worthwhile" (13%) or "worthwhile but not very worthwhile" (24%).
