A is for Apathy. B is for Bureaucracy, and C is for Catastrophic Failure. While many procedural designers and level builders can no longer rely on the original Unity Vector Units, they still remain enormously useful for technical level design. Unfortunately, V.U.'s don't work well with complex terrain. The height of your terrain is limited to the total number of units in your Unity project, which is usually between 256 and 65535. After that, the terrain will begin to degrade. Each iteration of the terrain will begin to look more and more blurry. This is usually referred to as waterfall or "digital's going down hill" - but it's also known as "corruption", "blobby", or "dirty" terrain. This is how UZG acts to bring you the ultimate terrain of digital destruction. Working From Vector Units. This concept was developed by IsoRo. The idea was to break down Unity's Unit Vector Units (V.U.) into thousands of tiles and move them into the native terrain using global transformations as the main tools. Take a look at the following video to get an idea of what's happening. So what's this all about? This is a postmortem of a level built using Unity's components and an Idea of what a future version of Unity should look like. The main concept is to have procedural level generation that is both easy for designers to work on as well as powerful. Here you can read a message the developers left in the game : "Hi there. We apologize for the short notice. The game has now been released to the public :) We've also prepared a list of the most critical bugs in the game at this moment, however none of them can be unlocked without an internal server changing. These bugs will be worked on in the next release - we are planning to do one more release next week. After it, we'll do a breakdown of the bug-fixing before we do another release. If this is new to you - "PUG" stands for Player Unstoppable Game - refers to a type of gaming genre that you can play against an other player in a local and free-for-all manner. Sokopop "Pick Up and Play Game" was meant to be another installment to this type of gaming style and we were more than happy to finally get one of those in our portfolio. The good news is, you won't need a Server anymore to play it, so our servers finally won't be full as long as the game is online :) We'll do a more detailed breakdown and the discussion of the most important bugs later. Have fun - hope you enjoy playing! - The Sokpop Team" Virus protection : We are in the process of updating our server to up2date Anti Virus software.

Please note: it is your responsibility to make sure these are still offered as of your description. The owner of this site updates his CEPHUS accordingly. The CEPHUS Group was formed in 2000 after our founder of ZENO Communications and Test Group fell in love with the power of the PDF and one day 'on the spur of the moment' decided to look at other ways to digitally display the many testimonials of how they improve their workshops and life with ZENO products. CEPHUS was named after Zeus, the Roman god of sky and thunderbolt. The word CEPHUS is the Latin word for 'sky'. One day on the spur of the moment, the CEPHUS Group decided to make a protocol for every need of using documentation (including CD ROM, POSTER, DVD, PDF, handouts and print-out). Creative services have been saved with the CEPHUS Group. Isn't that half the battle? CD's and DVD's? The answer is easy; they are near extinction and then how do you get them out to clients? CEPHUS stands for 'Communication Enhancement Protocol for Users of the Set-Top Box' - a protocol for improving communications equipment, mainly the plasma, LCD and CRT monitors and televisions. With the coming of the 1995 Broad Band Digital Network CEPHUS have found the perfect route for the analog medium of information and assignment reporting for the Analog TV, Hand held Telephones, Computer Systems, Stores, Report Creating, CMS (Content Management System) Software, Electronic Paper and Computer Network. The future for the CEPHUS Group will be based on better use of websites, improved reports and more difficult me

As our representatives, it is your duty to protect the citizens of Rome! As a high-ranking Roman senator, or Curule aedile, you can help solve various problems and safeguard the capital city of the Roman Empire. As leader, you must answer to the Emperor, but will your loyalty to the crown be to Caesar or to Rome? You will have to make tough decisions to earn yourself respect and rise up the ranks of the Roman Senate. Join the Empire! 4 classic characters from the eponymous game returns in the original "Rome: Total War" expansion, which introduces three new playable factions and 10 new civilizations in the faction-based game. Three eras are covered in the expansion, each offering an entirely new campaign to play, mixing combat and politics. The playable faction campaigns cover the time from the birth of Rome through the rise of Augustus. Features: Rome: Total War - Empire Divided: Featuring two new factions from the time of Augustus, Augustus' succession and the Illyrians, each with its own campaign and generals. Featuring three new civilizations, 10 new leaders and 42 new units. The first Rome: Total War expansion will feature a rework of the faction selection, both in terms of factions which can be selected, and the AI levels which act as a base for selecting your strategies and control over your power base. The focus of this first expansion is not just on the strength of the faction, but on an even wider approach of the added bonuses in terms of influence over the other cities, and the new exclusive tools in the construction screen. More factions and weapons are made available, even for those at the lowest tiers and from the last expansions. New mechanics are also introduced in the terrain and city management systems. Factions The factions featured in Rome: Total War - Empire Divided, offer a wide range of factions from one extreme to the other. Those included in the existing starting campaigns are Romans, Celts and Cappadocians, with a new faction based on the Illyrians, the Eastern Celts. New factions are presented from a couple of cultures, including Teuton and Teutonic Celts, and Libyans. In addition, players will be able to play as one of the three empires of Rome - Republic, Empire or Augustus - or the revolting plebs faction. The faction line-up is as follows:
