CMV-induced teratoma formation in nude mice: in vitro studies of mitosis-free and proliferative cells in teratoma cell suspensions. Thirty-four murine teratoma cell lines were established from tumor-bearing mice and characterized for a variety of biological parameters. The results reveal no consistent differences between teratomas induced by ultraviolet light and those induced by murine cytomegalovirus (MCMV). Tumor cells of these two types were transplanted into nude mice in order to determine whether teratomas induced by MCMV contain mitotic tumor cells or whether a high proportion of Ki67 and c-myc positive cells are likely to be non-dividing. Teratomas that were induced by MCMV and processed similarly to tumor cell suspensions contained a higher proportion of Ki67 positive cells than tumor cells induced by UV light and processed in a similar manner. The proportion of c-myc positive tumor cells was low in both groups. The detection of non-dividing cells was affected by small differences in the time between induction of teratomas and processing of the tumors. Tumors induced by MCMV may contain a subpopulation of non-dividing tumor cells when the tumors are processed within three weeks, but the frequency of such cells decreases markedly and are rarely detectable after six weeks post-inoculation. Those tumors induced by UV light contain a mixture of cells undergoing active proliferation and cells that may be in the process of withdrawing from the cell cycle. We Need Two Separate List of Transitional I think the problem of having a single list is that we're having to decide how we want to handle some things. For instance, I think it's fair to say that we've got a single set of occupations that probably aren't going to be accepted by a lot of jobs in the future. But, realistically, I think there will still be a need for a great number of organizations who are making a pretty good living off of these people who are in the middle of transitions. Look at housing. Even though there's a great number of home renov

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image processing apparatus and an image processing method, and more particularly, to an image processing apparatus and an image processing method which can perform image processing in accordance with correction of an object image on the basis of information concerning the recording face of a printout. 2. Description of the Related Art In a conventional image processing apparatus, image processing concerning a printout is performed in accordance with the following method in order to prevent deterioration in the quality of a printout. When there is no other image present in a printout, only image processing associated with correction of the printout is performed. In order to eliminate a block pattern that has been generated due to rotation of an image in the printout, for example, the image on the basis of which the correction is performed is rotated so that the correction is performed based on the rotated image. In this case, there are many types of rotation processing. In general, many types of rotation processing are realized by generating a halftone dot pattern of a certain size, causing the halftone dot pattern to be printed, converting the rotation-processed image obtained by the printing into a certain size, and then printing the converted image. Also, in the case where the user of the image processing apparatus changes the size of a rotation-processed image or the rotation angle of the rotation-processed image, the user causes the image to be rotated or the rotation angle of the rotation-processed image to be changed. However, in the case where the user changes the rotation-processed image or the rotation angle of the rotation-processed image, the user needs to print the rotation-processed image to verify the correction. As described above, the user must print the rotation-processed image. Therefore, there arises a problem in that printing, for example, a large number of rotation-processed images so as to allow the user to check the rotation-processed images requires a considerable length of time. As small passenger aircraft have become smaller and have also increased the number of passengers they carry, the problem of space constraints for passengers has become severe. This has led to the need for the reduction of the size of the passenger seats and the need to
