STAAD Pro Connect Edition FREE STANDALONE LINK TO DOWNLOAD.The U.S. is experiencing a growing rift with China over its aggressive approach to cybersecurity—and the White House may soon have a greater sense of how bad the problem has become. The U.S. trade deficit with China hit a record high in 2018, and the conflict between the countries will most likely dominate a key economic summit next month. The Trump administration has imposed tariffs on $50 billion worth of Chinese imports in response to complaints that Beijing steals technology. President Donald Trump has repeatedly accused China of economic theft, though Beijing has denied these claims. Chinese government officials have reacted to the U.S. move with threats of retaliation, including building up a $75 billion military presence in the South China Sea. The White House says China is also allegedly installing "backdoors" into U.S. technology, thus hindering the ability to stop cyber attacks. But a spokeswoman for China's foreign ministry on Monday insisted the U.S. was not justified in imposing the tariffs and was instead "trying to create tensions and cause damage." Carlsen Will Have a Face-to-Face with Alexei Kiselyov, A Russian Television Journalist Who Accused Carlsen of Stealing The World Chess Championship from Russia, Which Awarded Carlsen in 2007. Chess World Fists Fight Over Faceoff With Russian Journalist Accusing Carlsen Of Stealing Championship Getty Images As a trial prelude to the match, which is scheduled to begin on Monday, the two players will have a face-to-face discussion on Sunday and then be interviewed by Russian journalist Alexei Kiselyov. World Chess Championships, Eighth Match, Sochi 2014 Alexei Kiselyov, a journalist for the prestigious program on Russia's REN TV, a Kremlin-funded news outlet, was in charge of covering the first match between Gelfand and Korobov. As a result, he's been given the task of interviewing Carlsen on Sunday. Kiselyov is best known as the man who captured the attention of Western audiences when he declared that Magnus Carlsen, the Norwegian chess player, was a "fraud" because he stole the world championship from Russia, which awarded the title to Carlsen in 2007. According to Kiselyov, Carlsen's title was won legitimately after long deliberations of the Russian Chess Federation, while his predecessor, Anatoly Karpov, was "stealing" the title from them. Karpov had been awarded the title in 1975 and left his native country in 1985 after his patriotic anthem was booed by a Russian audience at the Olympiad in Mexico, an event he won. However, this was viewed as backbiting by Karpov, who considered the booing an insult to his country. Russia
