Superstatic is a top-down shooter where you're given the ability to possess and control your enemies. Using "copies", you're able to perform a variety of skills including killing enemies within a certain radius, chaining kills together based on your current combo, teleporting to your copy's position and more. The story centers on an addict who desperately turns to a clinical trial for a new drug. The drug is said to enhance the user's psychological capabilities, but it instead gives him mind control. After discovering some documents, he realizes that he is scheduled to be terminated. Infuriated, he goes after the creators of the drug through their webs of lies and conspiracies. The game also includes a level editor allowing you to make your own custom levels using your own graphics, maps, guns, conversations and enemies. FEATURES Possess your enemies, use them to fight for you and gain new abilities along the way Rich branching storyline - the choices you make determine the levels you play Large, open levels designed around multiple paths and freedom of choice Fully fleshed-out modding system: create your own levels, enemies and guns Fast-paced, quick restart gameplay Original soundtrack featuring dark, driving synths and pulse-pounding beats. Q: How do I report a malicious site that has been purchased and is spreading malware? I recently learned that a "competitor" had purchased a couple of domains at very low cost and had them set up to spread malware. The malware is just a simple bot that has the potential to take over the domain name in order to push its own fake antivirus/anti-spyware. The problem is that with a low-cost, easy-to-set-up technique like this, it's not obvious how to report it to authority. I don't want to give my contact information to this person. I don't want to divulge my identity to anyone. I don't want to write a letter saying, "this site is acting maliciously". When I reported the site, I think the GoDaddy person wanted the contact information of my website and didn't want to get in trouble for ordering me to remove the site. How can I report this and let GoDaddy know that it has malware for sale? A: You can report it to the GoDaddy contact detail via web. Here's what you need to do: Go to

We've made a second batch of mugs with retro photo backgrounds and retro lettering fonts. They're a small order but we thought we'd share them to see how many people are out there still loving those old-school fonts and designs. A note to our vintage-style mugs: we've adapted the colours of our design to not be too blue (mostly because you've got no red in your hair). We've tried to match the colours of the photos and lettering styles we used for the old mugs - they're a work in progress, and you may see something slightly different when it's all done. You can find more of our designs here. See you in the forums! What's new in Superstatic:

Safety has put out an eggnog themed Christmas card. I was excited to see the new coat and this architecture, even though I'm not from Germany and I probably might never be, ever. This page introduces some new features, including a new Pickup, customizable hashtags, comments, tags, author, memes, and direct comments on YouTubers as well as Page Shutdown. Some features will be introduced and gradually implemented, for example with the ability to see recent ratings and comments. I'll dive a little bit more into the Pickup feature later. The ability to see recent ratings and comments Before this, all ratings and comments were stored in the database. Now a Reddit specific table is used, referred to as rcomments_active. This is also used to store flags about comments. When a website has a star rating system, the database will sometimes get some errors. This happens when a 5 star rate is saved but an update query has not included the current time. It could happen that multiple users try to save the same rate, which means users were waiting too long between their updates, and that the earliest rate was over 5 by that point. Sometimes this would lead to a rating of 5 stars being suddenly reversed to a 0 in order to save the rate. Reading the database The database is also used to see the reddit status of a channel. Set the database to read reddit status mode You can use query to read the database fields and filters associated with the query. Workaround for efficiently getting the list of usernames with multiple votes As of 12/24/2017, a Reddit specific query has been implemented in the database to work with the original coding. $redditpolls = $client->hgetall(""); To get a similar list, we need to leverage reddit posts. Here is an example script: $redditpolls = $client->hgetall(""); However this is less efficient: the reddit post only contains information about the poll's name, user name, and the highest rating (first
