"Now, I'm sure I'm not alone here, but I really enjoy playing Survival Horror games, and The Gateway offers a satisfying blend of my two favorite genres: survival and horror. And the fact that the developers of this game are not afraid to use a big challenge like Survival Horror doesn't hurt either. The concept of a man stranded on an island with only one human companion, while the rest of the population is constantly turning hostile, and trying to kill him, is quite an interesting idea. What's new:

to the 21st Century The Scientific and Medical Advances over the past century brought forth the knowledge to use quantum laws such as "entanglement" and "quantum entanglement." At the turn of the century, Nikola Tesla first proposed that the Earth is made up of an outer core, a middle layer (Mantle), and an inner layer (Concrete). Based on this information, Dr. Alfred Wegener was able to propose his theory of "continental drift". He theorized that the earth is constantly moving and that some continents are drifting north and others drifting south. The Traveling Stone of Assisi, Italy - Comet of 1518 (From a Computer image) The next decade found many of the leading scientists beginning to research the theory of relativity. Einstein published two theories during this time which revolutionized the world. The theory of relativity was however, difficult to understand at first. Einstein explained many parts of this theory in terms which can be understood by anyone. The major example of this is the Theory of Relativity. Einstein discovered that time and space were no longer the same. There was one single time and dimension. Time was related to space and matter. There was only one time. There was no time before the beginning. There was no time after the end. But there was an "end" to time. There was no space between the beginning and the end. The distance between the beginning and end was infinite. Matter (light, matter, space, and time) traveled at a constant speed. The speed was infinite because it was relative to the time/space properties that mattered. The speed was called the speed of light. This is one of the most difficult concepts for us to understand because we think that things move at a certain speed and if something moves faster than that then we think that it's going too fast. But Einstein showed us that everything moves at the same speed - THE speed of light.

According to Einstein, the speed of the Earth traveling around the Sun is determined by the speed of light. Another revolutionary theory is Einstein's Quantum Theory. Einstein's Theory of Quantum - Imagine that something is bouncing around the room. We describe it's actions as if the energy that determines the bouncing is being controlled by us. But it is not the same energy that is affecting the objects in the room. The amount of energy that the bouncing objects in the room get depends on the overall situation in the room. Einstein explained that ALL
