#9 In an hour there will be no more. I need to write back before it is too late. Chapter 33 My system paged the caller ID, "You have one new message," was the message, "from nimrod45@yahoo.com." I quickly checked my email, and I got a "You have one new message." And I saw my message from Noyd. "I am hoping that I have the final version ready," Noyd had been waiting for the last ingredients for days. "All the ingredients are ready. As soon as you get this message, your university will have the origins of Nina, Danile, and Mzibuli. In three days all the ingredients will be ready, The beginning stage will begin. " The message from Noyd ended with, "I am loving this request." A message from Kimmi, "We have completed the Zhikang village." What was the meaning of these messages from my system? Someone had asked of the rightness of the act of revenge? Had their own plans been laid out? Did whoever it was, had taken care of my system before my system could take care of them? I had received the ingredients for the person that had laid in wait for me in Kenya along with words from my Noyd, who had known of the delay in the arrival of the final order from him. The message from Noyd took a few days to arrive, which means that he took care of the affairs. To be safe, I had not been near my jaguar for a while. I remembered that it was easier to keep it away when I had not touched it, although it had been near me. I knew that my system would find someone to take care of the jaguar. Something is wrong. If my system kept asking for the activities that we had done, shouldn't it find me out? Looking at the open email, I realized that my giraffe in Kenya had something to do with the person that asked. The person had found my giraffe, which has been the root of the problem, had found Kekhi. For five years my giraffe and Kekhi led the captures. I caught them, keeping them drugged. It was better than hanging them from trees. Even though they

Metal Gear Rising: Revengeance is a deceptively simple game, and yet its conceptual simplicity renders it novel, inventive and entirely original. This is not a game whose greatest merit can be found in its depiction of violence. Its greatest merits lie in its fascinating narrative twists, its educational and eye-opening commentary on the themes of war, and its interesting character designs. Metal Gear Rising: Revengeance is a game that is built around its gimmick: all of its narrative is told in an exaggerated form of the language of the Metal Gear universe. Story and Setting: Metal Gear Rising is set in the future, where the human population is dwindling and is beginning to live in fear of cyborgs coming in to finish them off. A rogue special forces unit is forced to find the Cyborg Weapons unit, which is led by Major Ripcord. The Cyborg Weapons unit is a team of anti-cyborg soldiers who are planning to take down a rogue cyborg army which is out to destroy the world's human population. This game is a prequel to the Metal Gear series, and all of the events of Revengeance take place some 15 years prior to the events of Metal Gear Solid V. Manipulators: The main characters in this game are the Cyborg Weapons, the cyborg soldiers who hunt down the rogue group of cyborgs called the Cyborg Unit. Led by the Major Ripcord and her cyborg bodyguard, Dokaboy, the Cyborg Weapons are a team of cyborgs who have been created to kill other cyborgs. The six Cyborg Weapons are: Gazelle Spy Otacon Hagggar Marlina and Porcupine These characters each have their own unique specialties and play a rather large role in the story. All of the characters in this game are based off the Metal Gear games, and act just like the character models from the games. As a prequel to Metal Gear Solid 5, all of the characters are based off of their Metal Gear Solid 4 designs. At the time of writing this, the actual endings (Loco's and Ripcord's) have not been revealed yet, but it is highly likely that if you play like-for-like, you'll end up with one of these two main endings. Gameplay: Metal Gear Rising: Revengeance was created by Team Ico, and was designed with the philosophy of creating a game which required players to touch every object in-game. As a game which
