Click "OK" The present invention generally relates to television tuners and particularly to a television tuner for receiving electromagnetic carrier waves in the spectrum between 6 MHz and 1 GHz. Conventional television tuners generally operate by tuning a local oscillator to the frequency of the carrier wave received. A phase comparator is used in the tuner to compare the phase of the signal at the output of the local oscillator to the phase of the received signal and to generate an error signal proportional to the difference in phase of the two signals. That error signal is applied to a servo network to cause the local oscillator to be tuned to the received carrier wave. Tuners of the type described have been employed successfully for the reception of television signals in the AM frequency spectrum and may be used to receive and demodulate such signals in the FM radio frequency spectrum. Such tuners have
