Free Download bookchutipanir pakistan full book pdfQ: Are the tab indices assigned to the new controls in Form.ControlCollection? I am trying to find a list of the different controls currently in a given form. I have started by iterating through each control in a loop and checking whether the.Type value is equal to the type of control I'm looking for. So far, so good. I'm not sure if this is a "best practice", but I ended up with something like: foreach (Control c in this.Controls) { if (c.GetType() == typeof(TextBox)) { //do stuff } } I know that I can simply do c.Name or c.Text and get what I want in a single line. But I just wanted to keep it simple in the loop. My question is, are the tab indices assigned to the controls when they're added to the form's ControlCollection? In other words, if I have a number of new TextBox controls, are they automatically in the same control group, and would it be easy to keep track of them for later purposes? A: I figured I should do a little googling on this one, and I found this: // Traverse the Controls collection. ControlCollection controls = this.Controls; for (int i = controls.Count - 1; i >= 0; i--) { Control child = controls[i]; //--a-- controls[i].Text;// //--b-- child.Name;// //--c-- child.Text; 6d1f23a050
