In the late 20th century, Communism was sweeping Eastern Europe. Tito and Mikos KVN were on the same side of the Cold War, but Titos confident Socialist Realism wasnt working out that well (as this book tells). The Perestroika movement was gaining traction, and one of its most important figures was one of a legendary pair of diverging ideologies: the Pole, Vytautas Landsbergis. He was opposed to the Soviet style of government, its artificiality, its brutal enforcement of ideology, and its manipulation of international allies. Instead, he sought a system of Solidarity, which would unite, and elevate, all working people. Other thinkers, like the other half of this legendary pair, Aleksandr Solzhenitsyns hero-instigator, Leopold Hennings, believed there was no one goal to strive for, but many. Countries have their freedom to choose, whatever their ideology. Landsbergis was part of a revitalization of the Socialist movement, and was captured during a Moscow Revolution Square riot, holding a sign protesting the Soviet Union. In 1989, he was forced into exile in the United States. Other Students: Kieran Flanagan (Sophomore, Folklore), Laura Fogarty (Sophomore, Communications), Eve Khouri (Sophomore, Communications) English 431 is a small, 15-member advanced composition workshop, designed for already capable writers who have done considerable writing in the past and who want to further develop their prose style. Its focus is literary/creative nonfictionthat is, writing in which the content is based on experience and observed or researched facts (nonfiction) and writing in which the style is creative (literary/narrative). How writers say something will be as important as what they say. Students will have the opportunity to read and write short narratives in three different genres of creative nonfiction: memoir, character story, and essay of place. Students are expected to have very good control already of grammar and mechanics since these are basics of writing. Required textbooks: a class reader prepared by the instructor each semester and Strunk and Whites The Elements of Style. Other readings are on library reserve/e-reserve. We also use D2L for online discussions of writing. These sections are intended for juniors, seniors, and university special students and do not carry graduate credit. 5ec8ef588b
