Steam Api.dll Dead Island Riptide

when i try to launch dead island: riptide on steam it says "steamapi not responding. resetting to defaults. this is most likely a steam client problem. please try to restart steam and if that doesn't work, reinstall steam. you can't just delete steam_api.dll because it will cause problems with other programs. if you really want to delete steam_api.dll, make a copy first. if you are not sure whether the dll is being used by another program, just leave it alone. the issue i was facing was that my steam_api.dll was corrupt and was causing the game to crash. to fix this i first checked if steam_api.dll was in the game's file system by looking in my documents\windows games\dead island directory and discovered that it was not there. next, i searched the internet to see if others had the same problem and found a forum thread with several other people stating that they had the same issue. i checked the forums and i found a comment from "shan_cheng" that suggested that the file was corrupt. since i could not find the file anywhere, i decided to copy and paste the file from another game to see if the problem would go away. i noticed that the pasting of the file caused the game to work just fine. the next thing i wanted to do was to delete the steam_api.dll from the game's directory and see if it would cause the game to freeze. luckily, it did not. i did this a few times until i was confident that the steam_api.dll was corrupt and i did not want to mess with it anymore. once i knew the steam_api.dll was corrupt, i started to search the internet to see if there was a way to repair the file. i found a forum that suggested that i download one of the following tools and repair the steam_api.dll file. i found the following tools and used them to repair the steam_api. i hope that this will help others who have the same problem.

Steam Api.dll Dead Island Riptide

So you tried looking for steam_api.dll on your computer and you got no results. This is not good because you can't use an AntiVirus app to remove the file. The reason for this is because steam_api.dll is a common dynamic link library, and it could be used by another software program on your computer. Not only can this include a virus that is causing you harm, it can also be a Trojan program that steals your passwords or even encrypts your files. Many computer users are just not aware that this DLL is actually being used by other programs, but it happens all of the time. If you do not know the other software that uses steam_api.dll, or do not trust the website that wrote it, there is only one option left for you; using a special, high-tech process known as ' sandboxing '. If the program that is using steam_api.dll is a piece of malware, the sandbox will allow you to use the page safely without the malware damaging your computer. If the page is safe, you will be able to remove the steam_api.dll, which will stop it from being used by that program, and make it available again.

Step 1. Launch the "start" menu and open your "run" box. Step 2. Type "%comspec%" and press enter. Step 3. Click on "OK" and you'll get the command line prompt. Step 4. Type cd ""C:\Users\UserName\AppData\Roaming\Steam\"" and press enter. Step 5. Type "steam_api.dll" and press enter. Step 6. Hit your "Enter" key and you'll be taken to a prompt where you can find your Steam library. Step 7. Type "rm " and hit your "Enter" key. Step 8. Hit your "Enter" key again and your steam_api.dll file will be removed. Step 9. You can now restart your PC and make sure that steam_api.dll is no longer on your computer. 5ec8ef588b
