The Smart Object opens automatically when the document is opened allowing you to tweak the font size and font style. That works for Fonts, plus Text and Line Style section of the Style Control Panel where you can add color, strokes and patterns. If you're more concerned with your layers and their order you can click and drag a layer to its final position. That also works when you move a layer within a group that is coincidentally an image layer. You can always click on a layer to select it. When you do, the view turns dark grey except for the layer itself which is red and the group highlights. There it is... all the layers there, including the photo that the group was created from. The photo is now part of the group. To toggle between the original and the group, just click on the group and the move handle appears to highlight the layer and the photo. Click on the highlight to toggle, then click anywhere off screen to deselect. Once you're done you can right-click and ungroup it or click the group to lock it.
