It is important to examine programs of care that are designed to be as effective as possible to further reduce costs and improve the process of care. In an effort to achieve such outcomes, the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) implemented a limited-scope quality review of inpatient drug and alcohol treatment services. Study results were presented at the 2008 National Quality Forum Annual Meeting by the National Quality Forum Drug and Alcohol Subcommittee, and HCFA subsequently released a policy statement to address the results. The purpose of this study was to examine the program's long-term effects on outcomes and quality. We reviewed records for 698 adult inpatients discharged between January 2008 and December 2013 from 13 psychiatric hospitals that voluntarily participated in the limited-scope review. We compared patients who were eligible for the prison sentence reduction program against matched controls who were treated in other psychiatric hospitals. On average, participants eligible for the prison sentence reduction program stayed in inpatient drug and alcohol services longer than patients who were ineligible. There was no difference in discharge disposition. There were no differences in quality outcomes for charges, readmission rates, or time to discharge. The inclusion of eligible participants in the prison sentence reduction program resulted in enhanced treatment while not compromising quality.Reliability of laparoscopic cholecystectomy in experienced endoscopist's hands: Results from randomized controlled trial.
