The conflict occurred in database "Project", table "dbo.VersionCheck", column 'Version'. The statement has been terminated. Any help would be appreciated - I am very new to SQL Server and I have spent an inordinate amount of

I am not looking for a c++ STL container with new functionality, but is it possible to have a map where the key is not just an int, but a struct that includes a count of its occurrence in an array? // some code map allVals; int a[] = {0, 3, 1, 0, 3}; int b[] = {0, 3, 0, 3, 1}; map::iterator it; it = allVals.find(0); // then I want to be able to do something like this it = allVals.find(new int[] {0, 3, 1, 0, 3}); int value = it->second[3]; So my question is, can I add a new value to an existing map, without having to change the code for the key to remove the old ones? A: The std::map::insert() function is what you need. Inserts a value. If the key is already present in the container then the value is moved to the key slot. allVals.insert(std::pair(1, {0, 3, 1, 0, 3})); // allVals.insert(std::pair(1, {0, 3, 1, 0, 3}) // ^ // 648931e174
