A lot of games out there are the product of a developer trying to make something that isn't quite there yet but is close enough that it's worth the money to buy it. Some of those games are fun and are worth the money, others are just collecting dust on the shelf somewhere while waiting for the developer to get it right. For many such games, they might even find a publisher as a result. 'Devil is a Game' is such a game. The idea of it isn't anything new. A fantasy setting, an epic quest, a series of randomized events and maybe the occasional boss battle. Good simple idea to serve as the basis of a game with many different possibilities. Unfortunately the game is completely unpolished and the result is a very poor game in the end. Maybe a bit better than other examples of the same idea, it just hasn't been polished enough to compete with the classics. The production value is there but it is just not enough to pull it off. The game has been in development for years now and it has been improved in the meantime but it's not where it needs to be yet to truly shine. The graphics are good enough and not a shame if it were to be a first title for some developer, but they are still of a very good quality. The game only runs at low resolutions without any option to set the monitor to a higher resolution. If you are really that attached to low resolutions, you can change them but that's a bit of a mess to deal with. The story is, as expected, very bare bones. It is a map full of random events and the only goal is to complete the map. That the story is in English is great but the translation is terrible. The dialogue is very inconsistent and characters say absurd things (in some cases things that make no sense at all). No matter how much you try to look at it from the character's point of view, the translation does not capture the characters' true meaning and something has to be changed, which is odd for a game with such poor mechanics as most of the situations are just 'Duh!' moments (like the main character finding the first set of runes). It doesn't get any better as you continue play and the problems increase and you run a risk of being set back months if you have to stop and play the game in English to get things sorted out. The combat mechanics are alright for a game with a bare bones story. It's not the prettiest of all battles bff6bb2d33

We Are Evergreen is a collaborative rock band and music video project featuring musicians from Scotland and the Americas. Formed in 2006 as part of the City of Edinburgh's Festival Fringe, they have played in the Edinburgh Fringe since 2008. The band's name is taken from a quote by Theodore Roethke, "There are no little worlds, but there are little worlds in us", a line from his poem "The Lost Son". Current band members are Mary Kerr (vocals, acoustic guitar, whistle), William Kerr (vocals, trumpet, keyboard), Mark West (vocals, guitar, saxophone, keyboard), John McVay (vocals, bass, saxophone, keyboard), Peter Stalkin (vocals, drums, keyboard), Chris Murray (vocals, guitar, bass, keyboard) and Greg Brown (vocals, drums, guitar, keyboard). History Foundation and early years (2006-2007) We Are Evergreen was founded in late 2006 by Mary and William Kerr with the intention of setting up a collaborative music project involving musicians from Scotland and the Americas. Both Mary and William had previous experience in performing together as a comedy duo who perform as Mary and Willie in Edinburgh. Mary is also known to her family and friends as 'Eavy' or 'Eve' and has worked in the hospitality industry at various times in her career. Over the next 18 months, We Are Evergreen developed a creative collective identity along with a set of musical principles that included improvisation and a strong element of do-it-yourself and DIY culture. Drawing upon ideas developed with The Edinburgh Festival Fringe 2006, this led to the concept of commissioning artists and musicians to create music videos specifically for the band, each designed to highlight a key message within the band's ethos. The formal commissioning process took place in 2007 and led to the creation of two short videos, "Brother Adam" and "The Queen of Poetry" by The Space Brothers. In 2007 Mary and William also performed an acclaimed weekly cabaret show called Ekphrastic Cabaret. Festival Fringe (2008-present)
