Showing 1 to 3 of 3 C# Programming # Software Development Coursework Music and sound have been an industry since the early days of recorded sound. Recorded sound was first used as entertainment and then later on in the 1930s and 40s, recorded sound was used as a way to train military pilots during WW2. This coursework uses Python to develop a computer game that involves playing a rendition of the popular 'Tinkerbell' song. The game is designed to be played using the Xbox 360 gamepad and causes the player to make use of the accelerometer that comes with the gaming device, to navigate through a level. The music featured in the game is given by the 'Steinway Artist'. The Steinway Artist section of Steinway & Sons was founded in 1877 and is now the world's oldest surviving piano manufacturer. The Steinway Artist, played by the pianist Phil The computational abilities of the computer are the main tools used to develop the game. The aim of the game is to locate Tinkerbell by beating the computer at playing the song. The goal of the coursework is twofold. The first is to take a concept that is used to make money, even if the company is poorly managed, but
