[App Store Link] [Google Play Store Link] Although not as well-known as Google's own apps, the Dolphin Browser boasts a decent collection of features to offer users the best browsing experience. Advantages of a portable app The application is available for Windows, OS X, and Linux. An Android version is also in the works, and will be released later on. As for the desktop version, you can run it either in full-screen or windowed mode. In both cases, you get a browser with all the standard features, but with the added bonus of a file manager that can handle all the necessary file management tasks. Windows and Linux users need to make sure that Java Runtime Environment is installed first. OS X users do not need this, and just need to double-click on the DMG file to run the application. Things to keep in mind There's no dedicated file manager in the application. Instead, a browser is used to view your files, with the option of creating folder icons in the image gallery. What's more, the lack of support for online file sharing is probably the worst part about Dolphin Browser. While some might argue that online sharing helps with file security, it doesn't work that way, and there's no need to add additional risks when you can simply use the local file manager to store files. PANDA Description: [App Store Link] [Google Play Store Link]

Although none of the features that define Android Xposed are present in the newer version, Android 4.4 (KitKat), the framework offers a lot of benefits.

Advantages of a portable app

For starters, it's available for almost every Android device, from phones to tablets. All you need to do is get the mobile version of Android Xposed, install it on your smartphone, and the framework gets active in a matter of minutes. The great news is that the software can run even with older versions of Android, thanks to the framework's bundled update. Being a developer, you can customize your own set of features to suit your needs. Over 40 modules are available for the framework, with the Developer Menu allowing you to customize anything from XML files to modules. Things to keep in mind To install any Android Xposed module, you need to have the custom ROM version installed on your device. This means that you will have to flash new firmware. However, it

What's New In?

To simply put it, iStamp is an ultimate time and attendance app. Overview: iStamp is an ultimate time and attendance app for the Java platform. The application has been specifically designed with the intention of simplifying the time and attendance processes for the enterprise and small to medium businesses in mind. The design is responsive to mobile devices and tablets. Features: The application has been specifically designed with the intention of simplifying the time and attendance processes for the enterprise and small to medium businesses in mind. Time and attendance module: This is one of the most significant features of the application and where its primary use is centered on. The time and attendance module can be configured to a corporate, departmental or project specific level. This module is integrated with the company payroll department to provide employees with an easy and convenient way to manage their times and payroll. Time and attendance data can be easily managed, view, store, and export to Excel, PDF, CSV, and other commonly used formats. Customizing payroll requirements: The time and attendance module can be customized to meet the specific time and attendance requirements of a company. This includes the type of timesheet which can be created, how timesheet and timesheet hours can be grouped, the number of timesheets which can be processed, the number of hours required in a timesheet, the number of weeks to allow per timesheet and much more. Weekly timesheet generation: This is the most frequently used timesheet. As the name suggests, it generates a timesheet for a particular week of the year. Other timesheet options: A combination of timesheet types can also be configured by the user, so that employees can view the timesheets on a weekly, daily, daily if applicable, and monthly basis. This feature can be assigned as a default timesheet in the application. Employee profile based timesheet generation:

This timesheet generation is based on the employee profile. All the available employee profiles can be configured to automatically generate the timesheets for a particular week of the year.

Contacts module: This is the next most important module in the application.

This module can be configured to accommodate the name, address, phone number and other contact details of the employees and managers. The application also has a ability to generate a list of contacts based on the employee profile. Import and export data: The application has the ability to import and export data from and to

SQL server, Access, Lotus Notes, Excel, CSV, PDF, and other commonly used
