Been using Lightroom for a couple of years, and upgraded today from Lightroom 4 to 5.1.1. Setting up from scratch, and thinking I'd try to use a lot of the Apple cloud services the software had, such as iCloud, back-ups, and Apples photo sharing with family and friends. While Lightroom 5 runs fine, I didn't see much of a point in using the services that are supported, so I didn't use any!. I've been a serious photographer for the past 6 years. It's the downfall of any photographer that doesn't manage their Canon gear, but it's more than that. It's the fallacy of the "automatic" camera... to fast to be critical and to be wielded by man. I spend a lot of time using the processing power of the Canon image-processing programs (prior to dslr) to create my photograph of the day. If I did it without the artist and the lab, I think I'd have a lot of regrets... and yes, I still use the same lens from that time and have for possibly 6 years. It's a 70-200., f4, f2.8 (USM lenses). The f4 is my "f2". FA F is the famous f2.8-f4-f5.8 Hi guys, I'm really enjoying this "Adobe Photoshop Review" and all of the great info that I'm learning about how to use & understand Photoshop. I mostly use Lightroom as my front end, Photoshops work. I could never understand how to use Photoshop without Lightroom. The creator of this site and others who curate this site are my heroes because it has everything I need from this software. Not this low-budget review of the new version of Photoshop I just went though a little bit & learned some more about it, but I just can't believe that I have downloaded this software to my computer.
